

The 5 High-Utility Verbs

Verbs are essential in the formation of simple sentences. For beginning English learners, these five verbs are those most frequently used in social and academic situations. Expressing wants and needs are part survival language. The verbs to have and to like are equally important as they serve in expressing basic information. The verb to be is extremely important as it is used pervasively in social and academic situations. Its plethora of uses include: age, nationality, descriptions, weather, and feelings. And if that were not enough, it also serves as a helping verb!
